

COVID-19 Update

Blackhawk Aerospace remains open for business while doing our part to protect the health and well-being of our employees and our community.

To our valued customers, partners, family, and friends,

First and foremost, as the global COVID-19 pandemic continues to evolve, our thoughts go out to the men and women on the front lines of this fight as well as to anyone who has been directly affected by the virus.

While we are taking appropriate steps to ensure the health and well-being of our employees, we remain open for business. Any employees who have the capability to work from home are doing so, and those who must remain on-site are practicing strict guidelines to ensure a sanitary work environment and social distancing.

With these adjustments in place, we stand ready to support our customers and dealers during this challenging time. Engines, installation kits, and spare parts can be shipped as required. Fortunately, the customer support and sales teams have plenty of experience working remotely, so please do not hesitate to reach out to us for any assistance you may need.

Thanks to the support of an industry like ours, we are well prepared to weather this turbulent time together. Please let us know if we can be of service.

Be well and stay safe,
